

All JCWI's members must agree to the following terms and conditions:

- Abide by the Objects of JCWI as outlined in its Memorandum of Association.
- The Board of JCWI (the Executive Committee) reserves the right to request a copy of constitution, or such document in essence, from all group members (voluntary or community organisations, non-governmental organisations, commercial organisations, whether corporate or incorporated). Those organisations which do not have a constitution may be asked to provide documents such as OISC consultants' registration certificate, solicitor's practising certificate and the Board of JCWI reserve the right to refuse a membership application unless such documents are provided on request.
- Membership fees are revised annually and members are notified of any changes. The new membership fee will be only applicable on renewal.
- All membership applications are placed before the Board of JCWI or a committee delegated by the Board for approval. In the event of the refusal of membership by the Board the fees paid by the member will be refunded.
- JCWI's logo and name must not be used by members without JCWI's prior consent.
- Any member wishing to cancel their membership should do so within 14 days of the payment of the membership fees. JCWI reserves the right not to refund membership fees after 14 days.
- JCWI reserves the right to suspend or terminate a membership and all associated benefits should it become aware of any unlawful or fraudulent activities of a member.
- JCWI will correspond with overseas members by email only.
